

Are you effectively identifying and educating your patients at risk for an opioid overdose?

Opioid Mitigation Solution

Approximately 33% of patients prescribed pain medications are unaware they are taking highly addictive opioids. Recent regulatory changes have made it easier for pharmacists to play a more significant role in patient safety by enabling them to identify and engage patients at risk for opioid overdose. Pharmacists can play a critical role in proactively educating patients on the hidden dangers of opioids and the benefits of clinical interventions, which can help avoid, or mitigate the effects of, an overdose.
